We are living in a global pandemic, where healthcare workers are essential to treating and caring for seriously-ill COVID-19 patients. The virus, all over the world, has hit nursing home residents and caregivers especially hard.

That's why it's astonishing that at this precarious moment, the owner of Livingston Hills Nursing Home intends to take away the current health benefits of the workers whose job is to provide care to the facility's high-risk, frail, and elderly residents. The owner's plan would offer employee health benefits that are significantly less comprehensive and drastically less affordable. Many would be left without any benefits at all.

They will be forced to leave their residents for jobs with affordable benefits; continuity of care will suffer. Furthermore, this plan would create unnecessary and dangerous obstacles to infection control at Livingston Hills.

We are coming together and calling for the goodwill and compassion that the nursing home residents, caregivers and all of their families deserve.
